Question 7

Study Sources 1, 2 and 3 and then answer the question which follows.

You are a UK government advisor. You have been asked to recommend whether or not the voting age should be lowered to 16 in UK general elections.

Option 1

Lower the voting age to 16

Option 2

Do not lower the voting age to 16

Background

Many people believe that the voting age for UK general elections should be lowered to 16. In Scotland, 16 and 17 year olds can vote in Scottish Parliament elections and local council elections. It is also the case that by 2022, 16 and 17 year olds in Wales will be given the right to vote in Assembly elections. However, others believe that 16 year olds have not yet matured enough and should not be allowed to vote in general elections.

- Some argue that it is important young people have a say in matters that directly affect them, such as tuition fees and health care.
- In 2007, Austria became the first country to successfully lower the voting age to 16 which led to increased political participation by young people.
- It was thought that most 16 year olds would vote the way their parents voted or deliberately vote the other way, however a study of the Scottish independence referendum found that young people were able to make an informed decision on how to vote rather than copy their peers or parents.
- Some suggest that rather than lowering the voting age to 16 to be in line with rights such as joining the army and getting married, the government should explore raising the age of such rights in line with the current voting age.
- In the Scottish independence referendum, 109,593, 16 and 17 year olds registered to vote with 75% of the group voting in the referendum. Furthermore, 97% of those who voted in the referendum said they would continue to vote in future.
- Many modern democracies such as Brazil, Germany and Malta allow 16 and 17 year olds to vote in all or some elections.
- Norway experimented with lowering the voting age but not all teenagers exercised their right to vote.
- At the 2017 UK general election only 54% of the youngest age-group, 18-24 year olds, voted compared to average overall turnout of 69%.

Viewpoints

Lowering the voting age is not a new idea and has proved a great success leading to an excellent turnout by first time voters in recent Scottish elections. This success has also been mirrored in other countries who have taken the decision to include young people in the decision-making process. Furthermore, lowering the voting age for general elections has received cross-party support. Many studies have concluded that voting at a young age is habit forming, which means the younger a person starts voting the more likely they are to continue voting into their adult years. The 2017 UK general election proved that young people are politically active with the highest turnout amongst 18-24 year olds for 25 years.

Clare Connelly, aged 16

There is no public support for allowing 16 year olds to vote in UK general elections. Lowering the voting age would be pointless when 16 year olds lack experience on issues that they would be voting on, such as employment, taxation or pensions. There are very few countries in the world that have a voting age of 16 years demonstrating that this is far too young to be given such an important responsibility. Where countries have lowered the voting age of elections this has not led to improved turnout, once again proving that 16 and 17 year olds are not mature enough to take this privilege seriously. Young people don't have a high turnout in elections with 18-24 year olds having the lowest turnout of any other group in general elections in the UK.

Geoff Crosby, aged 45

You must decide which option to recommend, either lower the voting age to 16 (Option 1) or do not lower the voting age to 16 (Option 2).

Question 14

Study Sources 1, 2 and 3 and then answer the question which follows.

Crime in the UK

This bulletin presents national statistics on crimes and offences recorded by the police in 2019. Crimes recorded do not reveal the total amount of all crime committed since not all crimes are reported to the police. In 1991, over 500,000 crimes were recorded in Scotland, but in 2019 this was under 250,000. However, it would appear that the people of Scotland are becoming much more confident at reporting certain crimes, and therefore recorded crime figures are becoming much more reflective of crime committed in Scotland.

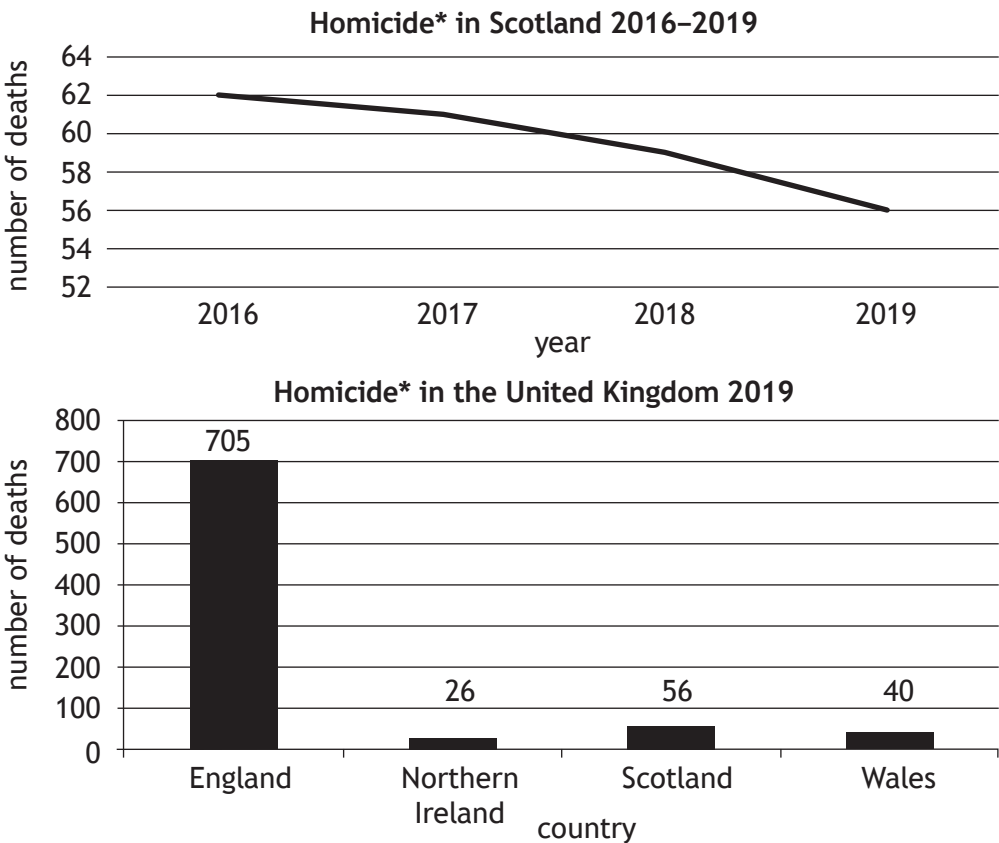

The reporting of sexual crimes in Scotland increased by 10% from 9,796 to 10,822. Part of this increase was due to the introduction of the new crime of disclosing or threatening to disclose an inappropriate image. This led to 417 reported crimes under the Abusive Behaviour and Sexual Harm (Scotland) Act 2016.

In England and Wales there has also been an increase in sexual crimes in recent years. This is thought to reflect a greater willingness of victims to come forward to report such crimes. However, this is not the case in Northern Ireland where reports of sex crimes have not increased.

Selected crime statistics

	Sex crimes	Robbery	Other crime	Recorded crime
Scotland	10,822	1,543	57,692	238,406
England	138,045	68,986	1,285,455	5,312,006
Wales	3,158	1,976	54,777	219,111
Northern Ireland	2,336	895	18,681	98,076

DECLINE IN VIOLENCE

Crime figures released yesterday showed that recorded crime in Scotland remains below 250,000, which is a decrease of 35% since 2009. The figures also showed that there were just 56 homicides in 2019, one of the lowest levels since modern records began in the 1970s.

This continues the trend of a decrease in homicide levels, which the Justice Secretary highlighted in a recent speech - 'The focus of the Scottish Government in reducing violent crime in Scotland has made a massive impact and the introduction of the Violence Reduction Unit in Glasgow has been groundbreaking'.

However, the new figures released by the Scottish Government also reveal a dramatic 24% rise in reports of rape, to an all-time high of 2178 - with two out of five such complaints being described as 'historic'.

These statistics underline two generational changes in Scotland: the decline in violence over the last decade and an increase in the confidence of people to report sex crimes for example, the growth of the #metoo campaign on social media.

These changes are not unique to Scotland, as Wales has also seen a dramatic decrease in violent crime and the United Kingdom as a whole is seeing an increase in sex crimes being reported.

Using Sources 1, 2 and 3, what conclusions can be drawn about crime in the UK?

You should reach a conclusion about each of the following

- homicide levels in Scotland
- sex crimes in Scotland compared to Northern Ireland
- recorded crime in Scotland
- the country in the UK with crime levels most like Scotland.

Your conclusions must be supported by evidence from the sources. You should link information within and between the sources in support of your conclusions.

Your answer must be based on all three sources.

India factfile

India's growing population of over 1.2 billion people are looking for social, economic and political success. International economists state that if Indian women were equal with men the economy would benefit by over a trillion dollars. India is ranked 139th in the world for female economic equality according to The World Economic Forum. The current gender pay gap in India is 24.8%.

The Indian government has many laws in place to protect its citizens and create an equal society. There is a law ensuring people are given equal pay for equal work and also to prevent any discrimination at work. Women participate in Indian politics with the country ranked 15th out of 144 countries for female participation. More women than men voted in 16 out of India's 29 states.

The government in India was set the Millennium Development Goal of having gender equality in education by 2015 as poor participation in education was seen as a key weakness in India's development. Literacy rates remain a concern however as only 60% of girls are described as literate compared to 81% of boys.

Indians traditionally had a 'son preference' which meant that couples wanted to have a son to maintain family tradition. As a result, there was a higher death rate for baby girls, with many believing that some baby girls were left to die. Many Indian families disputed this fact. However, boys are often still viewed as an asset whilst girls are seen as an expense. Often, a girl's family are still expected to pay a dowry (a sum of money) to her new husband's family on marriage.

Have your say

	Salman 6 hours ago Despite many laws going back decades women in India are still not equal as these laws are frequently ignored by both the police and communities.
	Rani 12 hours ago We need to have an equal society to make sure that everybody benefits. Where there is equality, societies are richer and happier.
	Vidya yesterday Women are making great political progress and over 260 million of them voted in the most recent election.
	Aamar 3 days ago Women's rights are protected by many laws within India.
	Sonny 6 days ago The gender pay gap in India is one of the highest in the world and this is preventing progress for women at all levels.
	Sherry last week I am delighted that girls are now as likely to be in school as boys.
	Cleo last month Women's overall health still lags behind that of men. There needs to be more money invested to reduce disease. However women's life expectancy continues to improve.
